

I have three favorite pets. The first pet is Puffy. He is a chinchilla. He isn't any ordinary chinchilla, though. He is a rare white chinchilla. My uncle gave Puffy to me because he wasn't able to take care of him anymore. He told me the white ones are rare, so I went to a pet store to see how rare they really are. At the pet store, they had only one. It cost $200. I was glad I didn't have to buy Puffy. Chinchillas are really soft. Their fur is softer than cotton. In the picture, he looks really big, but he really isn't. That's all his fur. Their fur is their defense. If he feels stressed or frightened, he loses his fur. That's right, loses his fur. A cool thing about Puffy is when I stare at him, he will wink at me. Puffy is so cute.

My next two favorite pets are my two dogs, Charlie & Rascal. They are dachshunds. Charlie is the spotted one. Rascal is the brown one. Charlie, like Puffy, is also rare. Most dachshunds don't have spots. When we bought him, he cost $800. A strange thing about Charlie is that his knee pops out of place sometimes. Every time he ran, he would run on three legs. When he did that, his knee would pop back into place. A cool thing about them is that Charlie is Rascal's dad. Rascal's mom's name is Muffin. A strange thing is that Mrs. Williams, a teacher at Otis, has a dog named Cookie. Cookie is Charlie's step sister and Rascal is her half brother. Those are my three favorite pets.
